PROFESSIONAL COACHING FOR LIFE AND WORK

Turn your passion for helping others into a career

UC DAVIS
Continuing and Professional Education
If you are longing for a fulfilling career, meaningful service and a life-changing experience, professional coaching may be the career for you. As a professional coach, you become a partner with your clients in a thought-provoking, creative and collaborative process that will inspire them to maximize their personal and professional potential—a particularly important asset in today’s uncertain and complex environment.*

By helping others develop awareness and realize possibilities, you will transform their experiences, both in work and life, and help them become more successful in their careers. Learn to engage and connect with others in ways that also expand your own sense of self.

* International Coach Federation (ICF)
1. GROWING FIELD

The coaching profession is flourishing, and the future looks even brighter. During the past five years, the internal coaching market has grown rapidly. The International Coach Federation’s (ICF) 2012 ICF Global Coaching Study notes that coaching currently generates $2 billion U.S. in revenue/income each year.

The Harvard Business Review warns, however, that “the quality of coaches vary dramatically” and recommends working with someone who has been accredited by the International Coach Federation (ICF). The UC Davis program provides you with a solid knowledge base for ICF accreditation.

2. WIDE RANGE OF OPPORTUNITIES

Coaching is being used in many different industries to improve performance and engagement. Individuals can also choose to become an independent coach and design their own practice. Whatever path you choose, coaches help individuals and companies focus on what matters most in life and business.

3. POSITIVE IMPACT

Coaching allows you to help and support others while building your career and gaining other tangible benefits, such as becoming a better manager, parent and partner.

“Hearing a client say, ‘Oh, I hadn’t thought about that!’ or ‘That’s an interesting question!’ is music to my ears.”

—Marci Mortensson
WHAT IS COACHING?

Professional coaches enter into partnerships with their clients, and become the catalyst for growth, change and development. Unlike consultants, therapists, mentors and counselors, coaches provide a pathway for action, accountability and follow through so clients can quicken their progress toward creating purposeful lives.

COACHES
Support personal and professional growth based on self-initiated change
Pursue actionable outcomes
Focus on future
Create feasible strategies for achieving specific goals in one’s personal or professional life

OTHER CAREERS

CONSULTANTS
Provide expert advice professionally
Suggest solutions to problems
Act to fix the problem – they do the work

MENTORS
Are subject matter experts
Train and counsel
Share their experience

THERAPISTS
Deal with healing pain, dysfunction and conflict
Resolve difficulties that arise from the past
Improve overall psychological functioning
Deal with the present in a more emotional way

COUNSELORS
Very focused toward short-term solution of client’s problems

“I chose the UC Davis Professional Coaching program because it is a prestigious university, known around the world. The UC Davis Coaching program was the perfect formula: high quality + a recognized institution + accessible prices.”
—Juan Pablo Victoria

“As a coach working with athletes as they transition out of athletics and into the workplace, I see how coaching can really change people’s lives. I met great people in the program and gained a solid foundation to start my coaching career.”
—Erica Cenci
DEMAND FOR PROFESSIONAL COACHES IS STRONG...
AMONG THE TOP 10 BUSINESSES FOR THE 2010s

More than half of companies around the world have actively incorporated coaching into their business practices. In fact, a study by the American Management Association reveals that external and internal coaches improve performance and profitability. The report also notes that coaching is particularly well-suited for the fast cycle and diverse challenges associated with today’s global business environment.*

In addition, among those organizations that have not yet integrated coaching into their policies, many are looking at how to implement teaching it in order to build and support the integrity and strength of their organizations.

Coaching Is On the Rise

Which of the following statements best describes your organization’s use of coaching?*

- 57% use coaching more than in the past
- 32% use coaching about the same as in the past
- 11% use coaching less than in the past

Coach training provides you with a solid foundation for preparing others for personal, professional and financial success. If you are a manager, no matter what level, a human resources professional, want to transition into a new career or expand your leadership role in your current career, you will benefit from coach training.

Today, coaching is provided at every level of an organization, so there is a wealth of opportunity. As a professionally trained coach you can serve as:

- An external coach with your own set of clients
- An internal coach within an organization
ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Earn a UC Davis Professional Coaching for Life and Work certificate with this five-month, 15-unit program. Gain the practical skills needed to effectively coach others, and become experienced in the core coaching competencies as established by the International Coaching Federation (ICF).

PROGRAM PHILOSOPHY

The UC Davis Professional Coaching for Life and Work Certificate Program uses the ICF core competencies as its foundation. The ICF core competencies provide the essential framework coaches need to establish strong coach-client relationships and support clients through their process of gaining self-awareness, setting goals and ultimately becoming the dynamic, life-long contributors they aspire to be. The competencies you learn are simple, but require a lifetime of focused practice to master. They also provide a basic skill set coaches can apply to any other emphasis or methodology, as well as coaching practice that helps build relationships and self-awareness.

ICF CERTIFICATION

This Accredited Coach Training Program is considered an “all inclusive” pathway to ICF PCC certification. Program features include: 150 academic credit hours of coach specific training; and mentor coaches who provide feedback on your coaching skill development to support you through your educational journey. UC Davis will provide you with non-paying clients to jumpstart the coaching experience and performance evaluation process.

DESIGNED AND DIRECTED BY TOP PROFESSIONALS

Executive coach and management consultant Carole Bennett, MBA, PCC, specializes in Management and Employee Development for Sutter Health University. In her private practice, she focuses on partnering with leaders to realize their personal and professional possibilities, concentrating on integrative leadership and whole person development.

Michelle Payne, MCC, is recognized as a leader in her field with more than 10,000 hours of experience coaching leaders. She is in the top 1 percent of the coaching profession, and has had the honor of sitting on the Global board for the International Coach Federation and been an assessor for the ICF since 2006. As an internationally-recognized business adviser, Payne turned to coaching after a decade of executive leadership in the retail industry. She is a leader in not only the business world, but also the coaching industry.
